

So, what is a bird?

Do you know?

An animal is a bird if . . .

- it has feathers covering all or most of its body

In addition, all birds . . .

- breathe air;
- are born from eggs;
- have a backbone (they're vertebrates);
- are warm-blooded.

That means they make their own body heat. So their bodies' temperature always stays about the same.

And most birds . . .

- fly.
